

Aporum Energy — Billing & Payments FAQ

How often will I be billed?

Bills are issued monthly. You will receive an email and app notification when a new bill is ready, usually 3-5 business days after your meter read date.

What payment methods are accepted?

- Direct debit from a bank account or credit card (recommended, avoids late fees)
- BPAY
- Credit or debit card via the Aporum app or website
- Centrepay for eligible concession customers

What happens if I pay late?

A reminder notice is sent 5 days after the due date. If a bill remains unpaid 15 days after the due date, a late payment reminder is issued and any pay-on-time discount for that billing cycle is forfeited. Aporum does not disconnect supply without first offering a payment plan and, where applicable, referring the customer to hardship support.

Can I set up a payment plan?

Yes. Customers experiencing financial difficulty can request a payment plan at any time by contacting support or through the app. Payment plans spread the balance over instalments with no additional interest or fees.

I think my bill is too high — what should I do?

- Check the app for your daily usage graph to see if usage patterns changed (e.g. new appliance, weather).
- Confirm whether the bill was based on an actual or estimated meter read.
- If you still believe there is an error, raise a billing dispute ticket; a support agent will review your meter data and respond within 2 business days.

How do refunds work?

If your account is in credit when you close it, or after a resolved billing dispute, refunds are processed to your original payment method within 5-7 business days.

How do I update my billing details?

Billing name, address, and payment method can be updated any time via the Aporum app or by contacting support. Photo ID may be requested for account name changes.
